

A strong offense is the best defense.

The 1990-91 school year witnessed the last increase in state support for education for three years. State Aid to Education had increased by more than 100% during the 1980s. However, the early 1990s witnessed a recession. As the economy worsened the State budget process took longer and longer. In 1991, some school districts even had to borrow money because of late state aid payments. And the weakening economy led to taxpayer dissatisfaction about making up the difference in declining state support with increased local property taxes. School districts statewide, that had been pushed over several years to increase teacher salaries to competitive levels, were locked into contracts providing generous annual salary increases that their state and local communities no longer supported. MCSBA was called upon by member districts to defend them against cuts in state aid. MCSBA campaigned to demonstrate the value of current educational programs and the damage to them that would result if state and federal support were curtailed.

Mary Salisbury

Major Issues

The major issues facing the Association during the 1990-91 school year were the Drug Free Schools Network and the unprecedented mid-year withdrawal of allocated State Aid to public schools.

President Mary Salisbury wrote the plan for MCSBA's involvement as lead agency in the Drug Free Schools Network. This network developed strategies to implement recommendations in the 1990 "Greater Rochester Fights Back" plan of action. Ms. Salisbury chaired the Network, which consisted of 16 representatives of educational and social service agencies, until it completed its work in Fall 1991.

The cut in State Aid occurred in December 1990; 1991 efforts focused on saving the balance of 1990-91 Aid and on avoiding further cuts in 1991-92.

Other Business

- MCSBA mission and objectives were reviewed; minor revisions were approved by the Executive Committee in February 1991.
- The MCSBA reception booth at the 1990 NYSSBA Convention in Rochester showed videos on local educational programs.
- MCSBA staff offered seminars on specific boardsmanship skills. These seminars continued for several years.

The 1991-92 School Year

Maintaining Programs During Recession

The major concern of the year was protection of educational programs. State budget woes during an economic downturn directly affected State Aid, and indirectly affected local support for education.

Declining levels of state support led to increased local property taxes—and 8 of MCSBA's 17 districts seeking voter approval failed on the first attempt. County budget problems hampered efforts of the recently formed cooperative with several Monroe County agencies that offer services to school children. A number of joint efforts were cancelled and others saw financial support cut.

To increase cost effectiveness, the school boards associations of Erie and Monroe Counties co-sponsored the annual trek to Albany.

Due to the effect of employee contracts on budgets, the Labor Relations Committee prepared, and the Executive Committee approved, negotiating and bargaining position papers, for the first time since 1984.

Morin-Ryan Sales Tax Distribution Plan Re-Visited

The economy also led to new discussion of the Morin-Ryan sales tax distribution formula. To fill a predicted revenue gap, County Executive Robert King proposed, and the Legislature barely approved, the elimination of the Morin-Ryan agreement. MCSBA became involved in several weeks of negotiations among affected taxing jurisdictions and legislators which restored the Morin-Ryan plan and approved a sales tax increase of ½ %.

Other Business

In an effort to inform the wider community about the fine programs in our schools, MCSBA organized a mall show featuring programs of most member districts. Districts showcased their efforts with a diverse audience on an interactive level.

County Sales Tax Revisited

In the fall of 1992, County Executive Robert King requested an increase in county sales tax of another ½ % to support the expenses of county government. His proposal led to negotiations that resulted in approval for the extra ½ % increase with a portion of that increase going to public schools. Because of a sunset clause for the tax increase, the Association began making plans for advocacy efforts to extend the increase beyond its December 1994 limit.

MCSBA/BOCES Connection?

A study was done to consider classifying MCSBA as a BOCES service. After months of study and discussion, the Executive Committee decided that MCSBA should remain an independent group.

Other Business

- The Executive Committee appointed outgoing President Raymond Milne as Treasurer.
- The Association co-sponsored seminars with other organizations on gifted education, student assessment, school management, and parental involvement.
- Staffer Judy Wadsworth developed handbooks on: Legislation, Labor Relations, board presidents, new board members, and school finance.

The 1993-94 School Year

Efforts to Improve the Finance Picture

The Steering Committee adopted school finance as its priority for the year. The standing committees devoted meetings to the topic, and sponsored membership meetings to explore ways to improve school climate and control costs. The Legislative Committee sought 3020-a reform and increased state aid.

To improve school budget vote outcomes, an ad hoc committee of the Executive Committee recommended a common vote date and a coordinated media campaign. Executive Committee members declined to approve a common vote date, but May 17 was accepted by 11 of the 17 involved districts. MCSBA staff met with media leaders, and member districts adopted initiatives to involve citizens in budget development and promotion. In 1994, only two MCSBA district budgets were defeated.

Sales Tax Update

Association leadership worked to preserve for schools a portion of the 1% increase in county sales tax after November 1994. In spite of efforts by the coalition, the legislature voted along party lines to keep the added 1% for the county. The coalition decided to continue its efforts.

Other Business

Sales Tax Issue Finally Resolved

MCSBA worked with the Sales Tax Coalition (of school district leaders, teachers, parents, city and town officials) to gain a share of the additional 1% in county sales tax. Support from our Albany delegation resulted in a compromise in May 1995 that provided additional revenues for schools, Rochester, towns and villages. This compromise was intended to sunset in 1999.

Other Business

- A Gannett-WXXI initiative netted extensive coverage of education issues with MCSBA staff providing data. The effort coincided with 1995 budget votes, and may have played a role in the approval of all but one budget.

State Support of Public Education Compromised

In spite of lobbying efforts by MCSBA and other education groups statewide, the New York State budget was not approved until the end of the 1995-96 school year. In addition, the Budget Office stipulated that the last 1996-97 BOCES Aid payments that year would not be paid until July 1997, forcing districts to borrow or attack budget reserves.

Monroe County Education Coalition Formed

MCSBA and the regional New York State United Teachers sponsored a discussion led by NYSUT President Thomas Hobart and Regents Chancellor Carl Hayden on collaborating to improve education. This event attracted 300 participants and led to the formation of the Monroe County Education Coalition with the area National Education Association and the Genesee Valley PTA.
